

SWANSEA

The Conservative Government has used the Urban Development Grant particularly to boost the redevelopment of the city's Maritime Quarter which is helping to transform the environment of Swansea.

In the Lower Swansea Valley, more than 1,000 jobs have been created by the Enterprise Zone established by the Conservatives. More than 1,000 council houses have been bought by former tenants, with increasing numbers of applications being made month by month. This right would be abolished by a Labour Government.

The Conservative approach is straightforward and resolute. We face up to the truth even when it is painful, and we do what is in the best interest of our country.

Abroad, Britain is now regarded, for the first time in years, as a country with a great future as well as a great past.

We mean to make that future a reality - with your support.

Julian with the Rt. Hon. Mrs. Margaret Thatcher at a Conference in April.

Dr. Julian Lewis was born and brought up in Swansea, where his parents still live. His family home is in the Uplands. He attended Sketty and Dynevor Schools, before going to Oxford where he specialised in Philosophy and Politics. He was awarded a doctorate in Strategic Studies in 1981.

Now in his early thirties, Julian is a Consultant on International Affairs and Research Director of the Coalition for Peace Through Security group. His political priorities have always been the defence of freedom from internal and external attack. In 1976-78, his campaign to help moderates against extremist infiltration of the Labour Party was widely reported.

Apart from his political interests, he is keen on music, driving and motorcycling on sunny days.
