JULIAN LEWIS – ONE-MAN NUCLEAR WEAPON

The Hampshire MP Julian Lewis has a logical, methodical approach. But don't mistake that for timidity. When his sense of order is offended he strikes back, hard. He is probably the strongest defender of Britain's nuclear deterrent in the House of Commons, and when reports of a failed Trident missile test appeared to have been kept secret within government, he moved quickly [as] the newly-elected chair of the Defence Select Committee ... While the Ministry of Defence had preferred ... to limit details coming out ... Dr Lewis' one-man mission for clarity gave us the widest discussion we've yet seen in Parliament. He's proving his independence ...

IT IS BREXSIMPLE FOR FOREST MP

The shortest speech of the Brexit debate this week may have been made by New Forest East MP Julian Lewis. Dr Lewis's 14-word intervention on Tuesday stood out for its brevity ... "In my opinion, the people have decided, and I am going to vote accordingly," he said, before sitting down again. Fellow Leave campaigner Gisela Stuart, a Labour MP, responded: "I thought that I had earned myself a reputation for brevity, but I think I have been resoundingly beaten. I offer Dr Lewis my congratulations."
